

Here at the clown house, we often play a silly little game which we call "You Good Dog"

Play is simple:

1. Repeat the phrase to your fellow players.
2. The first one to say anything else loses.
3. The player who started shouts, "I win!"
4. Other players can (and do) shout, "You win!"

I did say it was a silly game.

Now, here's the fun part: variations count!
Different phrasings, emphases, languages?
All good.

We've even played variations via chat.

That silliness led to posts with recorded morse code, `umop-əpɪsdn` Unicode text, and hand-drawn 𐤀𐤃𐤅𐤃 script.

They were all grand fun,
and reminded us of a crucial fact:

Simple play can encourage creativity.

Keep playing. <3
